Richard Broome tells the history of Australia from the standpoint of the original Australians; those who lost most in the early colonial struggle for power. Surveying two centuries of Aboriginal-European encounters, he shows how white settlers steadily supplanted the original inhabitants, from the shining coasts to inland deserts, by sheer force of numbers, disease, technology and violence.

Broome highlights the struggles and oppression under white Australia, as well as the rebellion, victories, and new directions taken by Aboriginal people. He covers a broad range of issues relating to violence, land, structural racism, gender, activism, poverty, and many more. Very informative and would love to read again sometime.
