The central theme of this monograph is that a unifying framework informs the human activity of design across all domains. With few exceptions, each idea in this work applies to graphics, environments, products, software, services, machines, and buildings. I dream that the design process could be integral to the primary, secondary, and post-secondary education of all individuals in modern society.

Design: Creation of Artifacts in Society

According to our text, of the same name of the course, the design process is the planning of the creation of an artifact that closes a “gap” in user experience. An artifact must be something tangible, not an idea, although it may be physical, such as an ice cream scoop, or non-physical, such as software.
