Classified as a drama, animation or documentary that runs for over a minute to under 40 minutes, short films are a great way to get noticed at festivals, showcase your talent as a filmmaker and create some compelling work to engage an audience. The short film is a rite of passage with many feature films growing out of a short film such as Tyrannosaur, 12 Monkeys ( Le Jette ), District 9 ( Alive in Joburg) and Napoleon Dynamite ( Peluca ), launching the careers of some successful filmmakers.

quite lonesome. Working entirely alone eliminates the best part of making a film — collaboration.

Filmmaking at its core depends upon the creative work of like-minded individuals. Those who make short films with little to no crew members do so out of desperation and an insatiable desire to create.

Making a Short Film With Little to No Crew: The Aftermath

Turn that idea into a script and then like any filmmaking process, short filmmaking also undergoes three basic phases – Pre Production, Production and Post-Production. The final result is your short film. Filmmaking is a collaborative effort and short filmmaking is no different either.
